St Lukes Gospel

Luke has some specific theological interests that come out in his Gospel and in the Acts:

Salvation for all people

Radical inclusiveness shouldn't be overstated as peculiar to Luke, because all the gospels communicate Jesus' concern for all people, regardless of social standing. However, Luke is particularly emphatic about it. Luke shows that the good news of God's mercy is not just for Israel, but for the Gentile world, demonstrated in the stories of Acts as well as in his gospel.

There are many scenes in Luke's gospel of Jesus reaching out to sinners, Samaritans, tax collectors, women, and outcasts.

Poverty and wealth

Luke refers to poverty and wealth more than any other gospel, and his material includes such memorable passages as the Magnificat (1:46-55) and the parable of Lazarus and the rich man (16:19-31). While Luke is kinder to the disciples and the Pharisees than Mark is, he is hard on the rich and powerful.

Table fellowship

Four meal scenes provide the setting for much of Jesus' ministry. They are places where Jesus crosses social boundaries (e.g. 5:29-32; 7:36-50). Several parables use the motif of a meal (e.g. 14:15-24).

Breaching boundaries at table is bound up with Jesus' death and resurrection. Breaking bread together is tied to Jesus' body broken for humanity, in the Last Supper (22:14-20). And the bread broken together is also the place where the risen Lord is present with the community, in the meal at Emmaus (24:13-35).
